Cowley Happenings

A. Heits has purchased a new Ford car.

Robert Weis has purchased a new Ford car.

Peter Vergin spent Sunday with F. W. Godsell.

Forest ranger W. T. Eddy was in town on business Monday.

J. P. Swinner, of Fishburn, spent the week-end in this district.

John M. Lauen has tired of this life and gone down east to get married.

Mrs. W. Patterson, of Bellevue, is spending a few days here with parents this week.

C. Raby, of Cardston, is buying cattle in this district. Collie Buchanan is taking him the rounds by car.

D. A. Sinclair, A. McLeod and W. J. Bartlett and family motored to town from Blainville on Sunday for a "square."

M. A. Murphy, John Kemmis and George Buchanan motored into Pincher Creek with H. P. McMillan on Friday night to attend the Masonic lodge.

Rev. Hillie Wright, of Pincher Creek, paid a visit to Rev. W. M. Chalmers on Thursday. Both left for Coleman this morning to attend the installation of Rev. D. K. Allen.

A baby girl has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Marlow, of Warner. Mr. and Mrs. Marlow lived in this district up until a few months ago, and are well known in this vicinity.

The Union Sunday school gave a concert in the Presbyterian church on Friday night in aid of the Belgians. Most of the programme was rendered by the children and an enjoyable time was reported by all. The proceeds amounted to $15.00.

The beginning of the end of the threshing of last year's crop is now in sight. F. W. Fisher expects to wind his threshing up by the end of the week, while George Dwyer has a threshing outfit at work at his many stacks which he hopes to get finished in a few days.

The school children had a holiday on Friday, it being Arbor Day. They made them selves busy by cleaning the school house up and planning to beautify the school grounds by planting trees as soon as the weather will permit. We hope every effort possible will be put forth to make the trees grow, so that the little ones will feel satisfied with their labor.

Tide Definitely Turned Against Hun

London, May 17.—The Daily Chronicle correspondent in Paris sends the following dispatch:

"Although the German commanders dare not confess failure in their Verdun enterprise by closing it down and cutting off the losses, the stress of public interest here, now altogether relieved of anxiety is passing to other fields where events of different character are preparing."

"Now that 300,000 of the best German soldiers have been lost on the hillside of the Meuse, a very grave and daily aggravated situation faces the Kaiser and his grand staff. The tide has definitely turned. From west and east their long-expected destiny is closing in upon them."

"At no moment in the battle of Verdun have they dared to bring their army unit from before the British front. Other parts of the German front have been stripped of all the superfluous strength and the forces in Russia are similarly crippled to feed this adventure. Since last September at least 21 divisions have been transferred from the east to the west front, 15 of these coming from Russia direct, and five or six others by way of Serbia or other indirect way."

"There is thus left in Russia a mere remnant of German troops, while Bulgarians and Turkey are being gradually left to shift for themselves."

"If the Germans contemplate a great offensive by land and sea against Riga and the Dvina," said General Churchill today, "they will have to reinforce their 48 divisions of infantry. These, spread along front of 500 miles, give the Germans one man per yard. It is little more for defense. For an attack 10 men per yard are needed on the line of troops."

"Twenty six such divisions would be needed to come from the east. It is very doubtful whether the troops in Germany contain the necessary numbers and the quality of German infantry has certainly much deteriorated. Nor would the wreckage of the battle of Verdun provide a striking force even if the German prize could not disengage himself in that region."

"There is every reason to hope that with the close of the battle of Verdun there is opening a new and final stage of the war, in which the armistice will be brought to reason, if not by imminent threat, then by the actual hand of famine and military disaster."

How It Originated

The military salute has a curious origin. It dates back to the days of the tournaments when the knights of the tournament were provided over by a queen of beauty. The knights and their equines and all who took part in the tourney, on presenting themselves before the queen, lifted each one a hand level with the brows, as though dazzled by the light of her presence. From this custom came the soldier's salute to his superior officer.

By August the big European war will have cost $45,000,000,000. The heaviest cost is on Great Britain and Germany. The American civil war in the sixteen hottest four years and cost $6,000,000,000. That war was hard on private. After it was over only one private and a million officers were left to tell how it happened.

Over two billion pounds of copper were produced in the United States last year. Halibut is worth over nine cents a pound, wholesale, at Prince Rupert.

Automobile prices are being raised—but the Ford price has been reduced $120 since the war began.

The immense Ford cash purchasing power has made it possible to overcome in many ways the serious obstacles met with by other car makers because of the scarcity and advance in prices of raw materials.

The high Ford quality is strictly maintained—and the most exacting government tests have shown that Ford constructive material even exceeds that used in most high grade cars.

This year the Ford car—always the most economical car to buy and to operate—beats all records for economy.

these offers have been suggested by anonymous given by influential business

Sentiment and Editors

Last week we looked in a neighboring newspaper, expecting to see an account of how a young man had gone wrong.
Not a line about the young man could be found. A broken hearted wife or relative had gone to the editor and asked him to say nothing, and the tears had been the promise of him. We have gone through the same thing ourselves many times. An editor is human; he has his likes and dislikes, he loves and he hates.
His strength lies between love and hate just that of an average citizen. We remember one case in particular. We had a certain case go by because it was a man's honor down with grief had come to us and begged the favor. A headlined man jumped on us and called us coward for saying a short time afterwards the shadow fell across his threshold and he came running and begging us to say nothing. "Yes," we replied, "don't don't you remember the time you called us coward for leaving still?" "Oh law," he replied, "but I was wrong." It is different now. And we listened to him, but there are things an editor cannot suppress. There are other things we can forget with propriety. As far as we are concerned, we would rather lose the grit of a parent than throw out a man for a missing people to be upon. We'd rather wipe the tears from the eyes of a mother than have "nervous" enough to join the heartless crowd saying tongues and sink the man who died in her tender soul. So when in this neighboring paper we failed to find what we wanted, we made no comment, but deep down in our own heart, we admit that editor and thought more of him, because he had a heart that was tender and he would rather listen to the plea of an unhappy child than to the wails of a broken-hearted mother wife and sister.

The above is from a country paper in Oregon and it tells exactly as it behooves every country newspaper man who is known by all his patrons. It is different with the editor of the big city paper who is practically unknown to nine-tenths of his readers. He is seldom appealed to concerning the suppression of news, but for that matter might, on a patron.
But with a small paper it is different.
Nothing is asked about it, and it is matter of fact, and such a matter, and under his hands the appeal, he is hand hearted and loyal. Even those who never spend a cent with the paper will expect to be favored every time they "sign a tag." So far as we are concerned, we get hardly tired of this "favoring to suppress" business, but we continue to do it—probably for the reason that we still have a heart.—EX.

How Recruiting Stands

Thirteen to which the Canadian-born, British-born and French-Canadians have enlisted for overseas service as indicated in the "Sum" in a statement by Senator Mason. His figures are instructive. Of the 667,000 English-speaking Canadian-born males available for military service, 85,000, or 12 per cent of the total number have enlisted. Canadian-born French number 44,000, and of these 12,000 or about three per cent, have enlisted. British-born males from the United Kingdom number 267,000, and of these 190, 000 have joined the ranks, or 69 per cent.
Foreign-born citizens number 368,000, of whom 18,000, or about six per cent, have enlisted themselves.

So far, 325,000 men have been recruited in the Dominion. Of this number English-speaking, Canadian-born recruits represent 28 per cent, British-born 61 per cent, French-Canadians 11 per cent and foreign-born, about six per cent.

On this showing French Canada has nothing to boast of. Four-and-a-half per cent is extremely small and no amount of explanation, or excuse can hide the fact. The enlistment of the Canadian-born, too, shows room for improvement, but that improvement we should judge from recent recruiting returns, will soon be effected.

Canada has yet 180,000 men to raise before the quota her premier has pledged shall be complete. To do this the French-Canadians and the native-born must be urged to come forward in numbers that they have yet done. Senator Mason finds in the figures above-quoted ground for urging more systematic effort at recruiting. He contends that the laggards behind at present in vogue are unfair and expensive. And with this contention most patriotic Canadians will agree. A Lord Derby, with the full support of both parties behind him, would soon give us all the men we want—and give them with the least interference with our industrial efficiency.—Vancouver World.

Light and Heavy Horses

If Great Britain found it necessary to utilize the race-courses of England for military purposes and thus put a check upon the use of the race-courses for entertaining hunting and to maintain horse shows. The reason for this is to promote the production of horses for remount purposes. Without some utilization for horses of this description other than military there would become such a scarcity that even officers' mounts would be hard to obtain. Dragons and line squires may have used as foot soldiers during the present war but it must be apparent that the reign of the cavalry horse has not altogether passed. He will ever be useful in colonial distances and in warfare against semi-civilized nations and tribes. He will ever be useful to open fighting. That His Majesty, The King, as well as his government, takes this view is proven by his recent gift of one of the best-bred horses in his stable of high-class thoroughbreds to the government of Canada for the purpose of getting remounts. That but one owner in the regard is entertained by the resulting authorities of Britain is further evidenced by the fact that the imperial government recently awarded a gift of his famous thoroughbred stable from Colonel Hall Walker. From these points of view the advisability of Canada continuing to breed light horses and saddle horses is plain.

When peace comes, and the large number of officers that have been created during civil life, they will doubtless continue their equestrianism. Therefore horse-back riding promises to become the vogue. Such sports as hunting and polo playing will receive an immense impetus and with them horse shows will return to greater favor than ever. In addition to the history of the horse process that after every irrigation of other means of street and road travel has been eliminated it returned to his own. An alleged horseless age came in with railway trains.
It returned with the bicycle. It returned back again with the automobile and traction power. As in the two first cases so in the last instance, the horse will return. Possibly not to the same extent or exactly for the same purposes, but he will be restored for the reasons, among others, that men with vitality in their veins like to handle and control living things, because of the sportsmanship that horse-back riding affords, because he affords in freedom and daring and because of his special character in the show ring. And he will never pass as a military arm.

That the heavy horse is the horse of Canada today would, dare or rate to dispute. At the same time it is evident there is room for his lighter brother.
Dealing with the heavy horse, the more judgment exercised in breeding the latter it will be for the country. For the last year or two there has been a slump in prices and, it is to be feared, less breeding than formerly in consequence. As a result, when the increased demand, which transactions, especially in the West, would indicate has already commenced, arrives at its fullness there will be both high prices and a marked deficiency of the light sort. With this, compiled with the fact that the wantage of horses in the war has been enormous, it would seem worth while to improve and accelerate horse breeding along with general agricultural production.

Anglican Church

On Saturday, May 20th, there will be a sale of garments, etc., at St. Allen's parish hall at Coleman at 3:30 p.m. The ladies of the Blainmore congregation are having a stall and earnestly solicit support. There will be music and tea provided.

Service on Sunday next, May 21st will be at 11 a.m. as usual, conducted by Rev. H. Gray. The subject of the address will be "Who is my neighbor?"

Read-Then Think

Now that you have commenced to read this article, just keep right on to the end until then you will have absorbed the most of the content.

What has this town ever done for you?
It has fed you, and clothed you and looked after you, and given you a home and kept the wolf from your door for the many years.

It has done more. It has furnished you recreation, and enjoyment, and has guided you safely over many of the thorn-bushes that beset the pathway of life. It has been, and is your home, but what have you done for the town?

Are you making your money here but where are you spending it?
Are you buying goods from the local dealers, who pay and otherwise contribute liberally to the upkeep of the community and your home, or are you sending your money away to some catalogue house that would at best give you a five-cent piece to save your soul from purgatory?

And now you have reached the point where we want you to stop and think, and think hard, and to a sure sensible and patriotic purpose.

The following sight, as depicted by the Mulvane Miner will soon pass away in many parts of America, for soon the beer will ride upon its tier, to lands where soldiers are unknown, and the growler never comes. Here is what The Miner says:

Alone on the depot platform, Rattled in the cold winter's breeze, Stands an empty eight-gallon keg.
With nothing in it to freeze.
Short of its last former glory,

Old ways are good enough for some—a change of view.

Innovations are viewed with reluctance. Steam railways had their opponents; in later days electric street cars were condemned; the first telephone was hawked Semi-ready tailoring is different from custom tailoring. It's an innovation—a departure from an established habit of ordering a suit of clothes tailored from a web of cloth.

You pay for a Semi-ready suit when you select it. It's delivered in
